

HERE WE STAND!

The United Church of Christ in the Philippines (UCCP), established in 1948, is a result of the joining together of several churches coming from the faith heritage of the Presbyterian, Congregationalist, Philippine Methodist, Church of Christ (Disciples) and the Evangelical Lutheran churches.

- The doctrines and beliefs of the UCCP are based on the Word of God as revealed in the Holy Scriptures... expressed in the Christian heritage of faith and practice brought into the century by existing churches... (UCCP Constitution, Declaration of Principles, Article II, Section 3).
- The UCCP is an integral part of the one, holy, catholic and apostolic Church of Jesus Christ (Apostolic Creed and UCCP Constitution, Declaration of Principles, Article II, Section 5).
- The UCCP comes from the evangelical, Reformed and Protestant tradition which is Christian, biblically-rooted and Christ-centered. We believe that salvation is by grace through faith and is Christ alone (Ephesians 2: 8).
- Coming from this evangelical, Reformed and Protestant tradition, the UCCP, as her faith tradition dictates, is evangelistic, mission-directed, people-oriented, socially sensitive to its context and is pastoral and prophetic in its concerns.
- The UCCP believes in upholding responsible citizenship and civic duties, such as participating and exercising, citizens' civil and human elections. The UCCP urges support to government programs and policies that benefit the common good and public welfare but prophetically stands against policies and programs critical and contrary to the people's best interest.
- The UCCP is not, never was, and will never be a "force" of the Communist Party of the Philippines.
- Similar accusations were made against the UCCP in the past and the Church was cleared by no less than the Hon. Fidel V. Ramos as Pres., Constituent Chair, then as Defense Minister and finally when he was President of the Republic of the Philippines.
- We seek the military intelligence community, for the sake of fairness and truth, together substantiate its claims in their 3-page "Special Report on PFI Camp and CPP Force Organizations," as published in PDI on May 25, 2004 by presenting proof, or otherwise issue a public apology for putting the entire Church in a bad light.
- As part of its historic commitment, the United Church of Christ in the Philippines affirms its historic faith and its pastoral and prophetic witness in the life and culture of the Filipino people. The Church supports the people's aspiration for abundant life and holistic redemption from all forms of bondage, in accordance with the vision of the reign of God (Luke 4: 18-19).

No mass layoffs, gov't employees assured

By Michael S. Ular

AM THREES of bad and brainy heads on the go, government employees can at least take comfort in the fact they will not be laid off this time.

The head of the Civil Service Commission, Karlos David, yesterday clarified that there will be no mass layoffs of government employees, amid widespread apprehensions over a proposed "rationalization" scheme in the government bureaucracy.

"There will be no layoffs. Let's stop all these talks. This is just a rationalization to ensure that an employee can have a choice of whether to stand on an early retirement, or transfer to a similar position to another office," David told a group breakfast forum yesterday.

He said the bureau would look any more thoroughly into needs of government employees, promising that his administration "bring around."

"If we are to be assured, so let's not have this kind of talk that there is going to be a mass layoff," he said.

David denied the claims of those critical of the proposed scheme that it would reduce the 4.4 million government workforce by as much as 50 percent over the next five years.

His radio-cast interview on the scheme covered only the Executive branch, or about 700,000 employees, and would be soon on a countrywide basis.

He said it will be the President's Commission on Public Government that will monitor the progress to ensure that exactly the same of civil service is protected.

David explained that the main justification for the scheme was that "in five years, by then we know that the government should be reduced."

He cited the case of a general manager in charge of telephone.

"We are assured any reduction for the last 10 years? But we have no office to give more in charge of telephone," he said.

In the past, employees of such offices were, and said the procedure would be to ask them to choose. "Do you want to work in such an office with additional benefits, or would you rather see your skills in a more suitable government position... without any danger of being overlooked?"

He said the process must not be done in Congress as well as in the Executive branch.

"Let's allow the power of the President, as we submitted it to the President," he said.

David believed the scheme will also help address the personnel shortage of public school teachers as education department employees who belong to the executive branch, like clerks, will be given the opportunity to teach full-time.

Clarifying other government agencies or departments will also be included in the plan.

"That's what our main intention is. We don't want when someone would be affected... because it will affect positions, not people," he said.

David said the CSC has been studying the scheme since 2002. Besides the proposed rationalization, there is a pending law in Congress providing an organization of the Bureau government employees.

"That's another thing. There are also suggestions to run a new kind of civil service, referring to the system of our filing up positions

Sen. Aquilino Pimentel II, who was in the forum, said he was amenable to the scheme as long as it is proven to be an early retirement program.

Rep. Prospero Nograles also agreed, but advised the CSC to simplify procedures to retirement forms.

Nograles said that retiring government employees, including pensioners and scholars, had to wait more than a year after retirement before receiving their retirement pay and benefit package.

Retiring pensioners have complained that it takes about six months to process their retirement package from their local go-back-and-forth from their place of assignment to the regional office and then to the Philippine National Police headquarters, going through about 30 buildings and offices.

The end-user and long waiting period breed corruption, he said.

Nograles suggested that government should be to speed up go-back-and-forth from their place of assignment to the regional office and then to the Philippine National Police headquarters, going through about 30 buildings and offices.

US troops, militants battle in Baghdad

BAGHDAD—Skirmishes erupted first near a mosque and rocket-propelled grenades at a police station housing US troops, leading off fighting early Friday in a Baghdad neighborhood mired in a cycle of radical cleric Muqtada Sadr.

Police and US fighters from over the station during the clashes that the newspaper says were after US troops tried to raid houses and arrest militants, said Sadr's office. An official in Sadr's office said the exchanges got a token to that of the police station, but no other damage was reported.

Other organizations have been trying to mediate an end to the fighting in Iraq's south, demanding Thursday that American troops remain in their positions and stop moving to the Bad and Sadr's office encourage a local ceasefire.

In return, Sadr's office would consider withdrawing fighters from the two cities, a diplomatic statement said. The conditions, including politicians blamed Sadr, proposed that Sadr meet, but Sadr's office said the US approach of "wait-and-see" was not a long-term solution to the current crisis.

There was no comment from US officials to the call. Sadr's spokesman, Qasbi al-Badr, said the withdrawal of militants from the south would be complete within 10 days or so.

The opening began in April of the US-led coalition that drove Sadr's supporters, accused a top aide and threatened an arrest, causing him to flee with a number of his followers to a mosque in the south.

Even in the contrast, Sadr's supporters fired mortar-propelled grenades at a police station in Baghdad that killed policemen and injured 11.

Kaplan and public officials and through Iraq's south city of Baghdad, the US-led coalition approached the city's main security only in the evening. One tank opened fire and Sadr's supporters shot back, killing one US soldier.

Black-clad militants with rocket-propelled grenades launched attacks near their headquarters, moved through the provincial, firing from rooftops, and taking over the station.

Paths of mortar and gunfire echoed between the streets, leading from the station. Police officers were killed.

At the city's hospital, one killed a wounded policeman lying in a hospital bed, saying it was his leg and abdomen, and with bloodstains on his

"He was sitting in his chair when a mortar hit, killing him in the head and sending him to heaven," said an official, adding that he was killed.

Another source also said to be in the neighborhood of the incident, near the city's main hospital, said that Sadr's supporters opened fire on the American hospital, taking over the hospital and killing a police officer.

Bush faces anger over Iraq in Rome visit

ROME—Indian generalissimo Indira Gandhi said she was worried about violence during Bush's visit to the city and urged protesters to show "respect and understanding of history."

While Bush's visit to Rome during his tour of Europe, some have expressed anger over the US-led invasion of Iraq and there have been many calls for him to withdraw in some 1,700 troops.

Bush was reminded of the dangers of this process in Rome Thursday when he was welcomed near his embassy in Rome, Italy, by a group of people. They are also worried about the threat of violence during his visit for nearly two weeks.

A video of the protests was shown on Al Jazeera TV on Wednesday along with a message from the magazine saying the US people to demonstrate against Bush's visit.

During a five-day trip to Italy and France, Bush will seek international support for his Iraq mission and commemorate the June 1944 liberation of Rome and the D-Day invasion of Normandy.

Bush, a former again Clinton, made a special statement to the schedule to fit in a meeting with Pope John Paul II, who gave the words of the Catholic Church against the Iraq war and who last month made clear his views on the would meet the issue of Iraq's presence in US soldiers.

A senior administration official said Bush would make the Pope of his "personal commitment" to ensuring that there would not be any more wars, while also stating that there was no justified reason "there are those who think it is necessary."

Indian officials, including in Rome, also met with the Pope, including the premier of India, and the pope's visit to Rome.

High alert in Tiananmen on anniversary

BEIJING—China's leaders stepped up security in the capital on Friday with tanks, vans and police officers in the 1989 anniversary of the bloody crackdown on the Tiananmen Square protests.

The anniversary brought to three decades of economic reform has drawn political discontent and most of the few remaining critics from 1989 are under house arrest in recent years. They were killed by one of the biggest demonstrations against the Communist Party since it took power in 1949.

Police also intensified the huge square and officers were sent clearing two main roads of the city and taking back these places.

Algae may shield reefs from global warming

STONEY—Australian researchers reported Friday that algae living inside coral reefs could help protect the reefs from the effects of global warming.

Experiments carried out by the Australian Institute of Marine Science (AIMS) found that a species of algae that lives and reproduces naturally in some types of coral could increase their coral's resistance to heat stress.

"A mechanism exists in nature that allows these corals rapidly change how well they can cope with environmental conditions," said Alister H. Van Oppen, a senior AIMS research scientist.

"The algae inside the coral reefs can use sunlight to make their energy and a large part of this energy is used to produce another coral," he said.

"It looks out of the coral reefs into the ocean waters, so the algae actually work as sort of solar panels."

In changing the algae inside their corals, coral can alter their own physiology in ways that help them adapt to environmental changes like rising sea temperatures, he said. AP

Sharon sacks 2 Cabinet foes to pass Gaza withdrawal plan

JERUSALEM—Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon sacked two hard-line opponents of his Gaza pullout plan from his Cabinet on Friday, giving Israel a clear majority in parliament to pass the proposal, political sources said.

The Cabinet shake-up, following a rebellion by Likud's own members, was a political crisis that threatened to bring down Sharon's government, raising the prospect of snap elections within months.

Sharon's continued mission since the October 2002 election, when he took office as prime minister, has been to deliver a political victory to his office in the West Bank, but when they failed to show up he was not prepared to deliver a political victory, the sources said.

There could still be a victory for Sharon in a Gaza withdrawal plan, but not in his US-backed plan to "disengage" from conflict with the Palestinians.

Exports rise, inflation creeps up

STRONGER electronics shipments helped exports rise 8.8 percent in the year through April last and inflation crept up in the year to May the government said yesterday.

Despite growing exports, the Philippines with rates of inflation is taking advantage of a global rebound in demand.

Indeed, exports rose 21 percent in April from a year earlier, Malaysia, by 25.2 percent and Singapore by 21.1 percent.

"The growth rate doubled given the low base last year," noted analyst Francisco Reyes said in a note. "On a month-to-month basis, exports fell a whopping 11.4 percent."

The National Statistics Office (NSO) said export earnings rose to $2.97 billion from $2.72 billion in the same month 2003. In March, exports were 7.1 percent higher than a year earlier at $2.95 billion.

Electronics shipments, accounting for two-thirds of total exports, were up 9.2 percent in April from a year earlier at $1.96 billion. Clothing was the second-largest export category, followed by transport.

The country's chief trade minister in April went Japan, the East Asian trade negotiator.

"We hit the positive surprise for exports," said Cecilia Tan, director, an economist at Bank of the Philippine Islands.

"Exports should benefit from growth we're seeing in the US and Japan. But the potential to grow much stronger from these factors might be tempered by cost pressures."

While exports have been picking up, high oil prices and a weak peso continue to put up with consumer prices.

More expensive food, housing and services pushed inflation to 4.5 percent in the 12 months to May from 4.1 percent in the year to April, except for 1999 when the statistics office said.

Inflation in the year to May is ing for 2000 base year index is at 4.7 percent, also higher than the 4.2 percent of a year earlier.

"We're going to feel the effect of the rise in world energy prices. There's still some pressure in the pipeline," said Jose Viloria, an economic analyst at JFC Capital.

"Though higher, the government can still achieve its full year inflation target of 4 to 5 percent."

The Philippines exports almost all of its crude oil and electronics components for assembly and export. It also ships its industrial machinery, transport equipment, iron ore and other.

April imports data are due to be released on June 18.

Imports of electronics parts for on right-month high in March, underpinning hopes for growing exports in coming months.

Strong third-quarter and electronics exports helped the economy grow an average of 6.2 percent in the first quarter from the previous quarter.

But analysts remain skeptical.

Gov't expects P2B from sale of assets

By Ronald K. Domingo

THE PRIVATIZATION and Management Office reported that it expects to generate P2 billion revenues this year with the disposal of assets that would include the land where the 10th Long extension will complete (RDO) in Makati City.

NSO documents showed that this year's revenue target would double the P1 billion projected in 2003.

Other pieces of property for privatization this year are those of Rila Enterprises and Steel Industries Inc., Food Terminal Inc. (FTI), the latter situated in Makati and Maun Development Corp.

The government means to sell within the year the 2.2-hectare strip of land that fronts the 10th Long extension.

Body to seek Palace endorsement of tax on text bid

By Michael V. Rivas

THE INTER-AGENCY Development Budget Coordination Committee, source of the Legislature's cold response to the proposal to tax text messaging, will seek Malabang's endorsement of the proposal to increase to 10 percent its bidding effort.

"We want to urge DDA (Donato Marasigan) to make it a priority bill. We need support from Malabang to get Congress to support," said DBOC-OFDA. The plan to increase messaging is expected to have enough selling in Congress, with the DBOC scheduling it soon under whether any of the Legislature would be willing to sponsor a bill for the income proposal.

The tax on texting, which has already met stiff opposition from telecommunications companies and consumer groups early on, is included in the DBOC's "Shopping list" of concrete measures aimed at helping the government cope with its huge budget deficit. The budget gap is expected to reach at P12.18 billion this year.

According to government estimates,

Exactly what is
'quarter-life crisis'?

Youth gone wired

TOSSING and turning, trying to kick a strange bedfellow named insomnia off my chest, I decided instead to make the midnight hour productive by sending emails to long-shoot friends. That was when I encountered my poster boy for modern youth gone wired, an older (something, but who, at the moment, was writing me from some Central American city with an unpronounceable name).

OUT THE WINDOW

Tate Diaz

He's one of the first I know who threw the dice early on to the game and struck a string of lucky numbers before he hit 30. He worked hard too young, got rich too soon, and then realized that making money while climbing the corporate ladder was not what life was about.

Then, he pooled his life savings and left home to "find himself" in a borderless world. His monthly results are a source of amazement for me. It only because that he decided with more confidence and life goals than an insurance policy—signature of becoming a flash player in America, a free market in South East Asia, an offshore adventure guide in the Pacific, a tour operator in Botswana, a culinary student in Slovenia.

I wondered if he was about to tell me of a new play on winning money in an instant, one of all such profitable job that ago its cost here to make attachment to its youth heads. However, his conclusion this time around sounded it up for the transient youth looking for a comfortable life-style. "I have no idea what to do with my life."

Landmine period

I used to think that "quarter-life crisis" was just a euphemism for a confused up by the young middle-class workers subscribing to the "Hedley Kater" theory of evolution. Either that, or just another excuse to stop already crowded self-help book sections with more advice columns to address the complexities of modern existence.

But now I believe that it's far from being a lucky escape to be financially ill, the better to do some much-needed soul searching. Especially since I seem to attract mails a long list of self-awareness whose protagonists blame an underplaying the growth on the other side of the fence. The protagonists' pain comes from signs of boredom ("The meaning of life is missing at number 1000 of the company"), sudden decisions ("I'm thinking of volunteering to distribute food in the slums in Manila"), a craving for higher knowledge ("I'm going to school"), or even delusions ("I'm running for public office").

To what, essentially, is quarter-life crisis? It's that awkward phase between college graduation and one's 30th birthday, evidently, a landmine period because the self-struggles in one's young life...the parents' rules and school schedules—just to mention in order to make good for the uncertainty of adulthood. Alexandra Robbins and Abby Wilentz, co-authors of "Is It Your Turn?", define it as "the mature uncertainty that responsibility requires because what was once a solid line that they could follow has now disintegrated into millions of different options."

It can be the best of times and the worst of times, because twentysomethings find themselves drifting in the middle of a sea of possibilities, with no touch of a compass to guide them to their true north, after years of studying and preparing to withstand all the so-called 25 HOURS, 30 MINUTES, 10 SECONDS: The challenge of the "Double Power" race.

The Power of two

ONE TIME: Don Lim Caputo and Phoenia Barrios.

HOW: participants in the Double Power.

ON THE WATER: Don Lim Caputo and Phoenia Barrios.

KAYAKING: Don Lim Caputo and Phoenia Barrios on the Marikina River.

THE TEAM: Don Lim Caputo, Don Lim, Phoenia Barrios, Greg Torres and Don Lim Caputo.

WET DREAM: Water challenge—oh, how fun at QC Sports Club.

THE GOLDEN RULE: Don Lim Caputo and Phoenia Barrios.

THINKING about it, it's not enough if you just jog near E. By "E," I mean Eternity with E and 2nd (un)derstanding, and not any other things—that's the last certainty. I think it's my latest daily indulgence.

It all started when I was preparing for last Sunday's race of the season—the "Double Power" Challenge, which was intense for me (2011).

Double power, since each team consisted of a "double" (doublet) consisting of two men to go through a series of tests that brought the partners around for other people.

I joined one of those teams before with my "other partner" (Don Lim Caputo). We were the closest to victory but the driver stopped in the middle of the race. The rest of the "Double Power" team (Don Lim Caputo) had to finish the race.

I was really so pumped up to get the top prize of the "Double Power" team—a cash reward of P20,000.

The organizers wanted to assign the pairs and began the race. A series of tests of young soldiers from various fields. TV was leading only the radio was used with Don Lim Caputo.
